
Write an introduction to an informative and factual blog post titled "History of the Fastest Car in the World". The most coveted title in automobile racing has been claimed by a car that isn't even made anymore. The Bugatti Chiron is the holder of four FIA world records, including the fastest production car ever built at 463 km/h (288 mph) when it was introduced in 2016. It's also one of the most expensive cars per hour you can buy in Europe, at around €500,000 for five hours on average. Sitting in third place is another Bugatti product called Divo, but it's not nearly as fast as Chiron with a top speed of 300 km/h (186 mph).

Write an article that examines the current state of the Israeli political system. The Israeli political system is based on a combination of Knesset, which consists of 120 deputies, and Ministerial Committees, who form a government. The Knesset itself is made up of two parliaments: the first houses a 120-seat house and a 25-seat Senate. The second houses a 100-seat house and a 67-seat Washington College. The Washington College is composed entirely of Arab Israelis but it has no voting power as it's made up solely of nonvoting members. Each party must receive at least 20 seats in order to form a government; the largest party in the Knesset must run the day-to-day operations and propose laws. The leader of that party becomes Prime Minister and the other ministers, like the ministers in a government, must form coalitions with other parties and vote to approve bills.

Write an article about a recent case or event that has caused public outrage. On 15 February 2016, Lulu Wang, a Tibetan woman from southwest China, was found guilty of "picking quarrels" after she killed two men in self-defence. For this reason, many Chinese netizens expressed their outrage through social media such as Weibo. Many of them believed that Wang was wrongfully convicted while many others supported her. While these discussions were going on, a man from the same place in China, a county called Tongren in Qinghai Province, was also found guilty of accidentally killing two people, but he wasn't convicted of murder and was released after serving less than three years. While the disparity between these two cases has caused mass outrage among Chinese citizens, it reinforced the idea that China is attempting to curb violence against women by punishing them.

Write an article analyzing why you think people vote for politicians who don't actually help their constituency. In the 2015 U.S. midterm elections, a lot of people voted for political candidates who promised to not support the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) trade agreement in order to "send a message" to President Barack Obama and kill the TPP. They also believed that such candidates would be good for businesses by cutting taxes and doing away with regulations that were hurting small business owners. These beliefs are commonly thought of as selfish because they only help the candidate by getting them elected rather than directly improving their constituents' lives in any way, although it is also obvious that these candidates could not pass legislation without support from Congress and so in some cases they would have no real impact on constituents' lives at all.
